

Portable outdoor power supply prices in Norway

What determines the price of power in Norway?

The market price of power, which is determined each day on the Nord Pool Spot power exchange, is a result of supply and demand. Norway is part of a common Nordic power market and is integrated with the power market in Europe. The Energy Act of 1990 provided for the liberalisation of the power market.

Does Norway have cheap electricity?

Norway has traditionally had very cheap electricity where you could use almost as much electricity as you wanted without fearing the bill. But that has all changed after Norway's electricity export lines skyrocketed the electricity prices back in 2021, and they are now far higher than ever before.

Why is electricity so expensive in Norway?

When production in Norway is high and demand is low, power can be sold to other countries where prices are often higher. Electricity is different from other goods in that it cannot easily be stored. There must therefore always be an exact balance between generation and consumption.

Who buys power in Norway?

Large volumes of power are traded on the Nord Pool Spot by power producers, power suppliers, brokers, energy companies and consumers. Consumers who purchase power for their own consumption are called end users. End users in Norway can freely choose their power supplier.

Does Norway have a power market?

Today, Norway is part of a joint Nordic power market with Sweden, Denmark and Finland, and this is in turn integrated into the European power market through interconnectors to Germany, the Netherlands, Estonia, Poland and Russia. Because of these interconnectors, power can be consumed where it is most needed.

Is Norway a power exchange?

This was the first power exchange in the world where power could be traded across borders. Today, Norway is part of a joint Nordic power market with Sweden, Denmark and Finland, and this is in turn integrated into the European power market through interconnectors to Germany, the Netherlands, Estonia, Poland and Russia.
